The Big Deal On Madonna Street

Italy's great comedian, Toto, stars as a retired safecracker along with a group of clownish crooks who are attempting to rob a safe, also formulate intricate plans and employ precise timing, but everything they do results in humiliating disaster. The other clownish crooks involved in the catastrophic are: an unsuccessful boxer; an untalented photographer whose wife is in jail for smuggling, leaving him holding the baby; a popcorn seller in a run-down movie house, who steals baby carriages in order to support his widowed mother; a hot-tempered Sicilian who suspects everyone of trying to seduce his sister; and a scrawny but constantly hungry ex-jockey. These bungling burglars plan to get to the safe by breaking through the wall of a deserted apartment next door. But nothing works according to schedule: to begin with, when the boys get ready to synchronize their their watches, they discover that nobody owns a watch. The attempted execution of the plan is filled with incredible mishaps, cluminating in a wild, memorable finale.

Tobacco Road

In the back country of Georgia, where living from the soil has long since been exhausted, the Jeeter Lester Family exists in a tumbledown shack, amidst self-delusionary dreams and eating what they can steal.

Jeeter, Charley Grapewin, because of the lack of money and ambition, never gets around to planting his crops. Daughter Ellie May, Gene Tierney, has a crush on Lov Bensey, Ward Bond. He is married to Jeeter's other daughter, who pays him no attention and finally leaves him for good. Jeeter's son, Dude, William Tracy, whose only ambition is to own a fine automobile horn, has attracted the attention of a psalm-singing evangelist, Sister Bessie, Marjorie Rambeau, who wants to make him her next husband.

Into this situation comes Tim, Dana Andrews, to tell Jeeter that, if he cannot pay $100 a year rent, the bank will take his farm away. This ultimatum leads to further family problems among the Jeeter Lester family.
